PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Organizations with internationally diversified supplier networks are 40% less likely to suffer major supply chain disruptions, while also achieving up to 15–20% lower procurement costs through competitive global sourcing. By spreading exposure across multiple regions, companies reduce vulnerability to geopolitical shocks, trade restrictions, currency volatility, and natural disasters.

This certified program is designed to advance your career, attain the Certified International Procurement and Strategic Sourcing Manager (CIP™) designation and to operate confidently as the trusted advisor in global sourcing, risk, and supply chain strategy. Participants will develop technical expertise in supplier due diligence, country and counterparty risk assessment, category strategy design, procurement contract structuring, and total cost of ownership modelling, with specific focus on cross-border and international trade environments.

Additionally, you will gain practical tools to manage multi-currency sourcing, trade finance considerations, import/export controls, ESG and local-content requirements, and supplier performance management in emerging and frontier markets. Participants will also gain knowledge in global market intelligence, resilient supply network design, and sustainable procurement frameworks, equipping you to align sourcing strategies with corporate objectives while delivering measurable cost savings, operational resilience, and long-term value.
